Enclosure to the Certificate of good standing

Dear Sir or Madam,

We repeatedly receive queries from foreign authorities concerning the competence to issue Certificates of Good Standing in Switzerland. Until August 2016 these certificates were signed by the persons in charge in the respective cantons and countersigned by the president of the Swiss Association of Cantonal Officers of Health (VKS). In Switzerland, however, this responsibility lies solely with the 26 cantons. Therefore, since September 2016 these Certificates of Good Standing have been signed only by the persons in charge in the respective cantons – usually, but not always, the cantonal medical officer. This letter provides a brief description of the Swiss system and the competences with regard to the exercise of the physician's profession.

Although the Confederation regulates admission for the independent exercise of the profession for qualified medical personnel (in particular physicians) at the federal level in the Medical Professions Act (MedPA), the 26 cantons are responsible for the implementation of MedPA provisions as well as for monitoring the exercise of the profession in Switzerland. The prerequisite for the independent exercise of the profession, e.g. for operating a doctor's surgery, is a professional licence from the canton where the profession is to be exercised. Someone exercising a medical profession independently in several cantons requires a professional licence from each of those cantons. "Independent" in the sense of the current MedPA means in particular working on one's own professional responsibility.

The regulation of employed exercise of the profession, for example for doctors in advanced training (particularly junior doctors and consultants in hospitals), lies fully within the purview of the cantons and not of the Confederation, and the professional licences are handled differently in each canton.

Each canton designates a regulatory authority for the monitoring of employed and independently working qualified members of the medical profession. If professional obligations or other legal provisions in connection with the exercise of the profession are infringed, the cantonal regulatory authorities can order disciplinary measures such as reprimands, fines or the revocation of the professional licence. The cantons also have criminal jurisdiction in Switzerland. It is thus the cantons which are responsible for issuing Certificates of Good Standing in Switzerland as only they have access to all the required information about a person.

In the appendix you will find a list of the responsible cantonal authorities and the persons currently authorised to sign is provided below. This list will, in particular, enable the authorities in other countries to identify the responsible cantonal authorities and the signatories and thus to verify the authenticity of Certificates of Good Standing. The signatures can be verified by sending an e-mail with the subject "Certificate of good Standing - Switzerland" to the following e-mail address:

COGS-Switzerland@bag.admin.ch

We will then send you a PDF document with the scanned signatures for verification.

The Swiss Confederation consists of 26 cantons
